

Leading with integrity - and walking the walk

6.00pm Tuesday, June 16 until
3.30pm Wednesday, June 17 2020

Background Note and Agenda for our 52nd Leadership Conversation

Society of Leadership Fellows, St George's House, Windsor Castle

This Leadership Conversation builds on our Leading with Integrity theme

A link to this Insights Report is on the final page. We will follow on from the key behaviours in Chapter Three inspired by these words in Chapter Two:

Without integrity, who are you? What are you for? It is actually all you have. So don't trade it, don't sell it cheap, don't push down your conscience when it's telling you an inconvenient truth.

Act from your integrity. Because if you lose your integrity, you lose yourself.

7 benefits from joining us in June

- 1 A clearer idea of how we might each better lead with integrity, and "walk the walk", in ways that fit in with our own leadership styles
- 2 Some practical tips for how best to model high integrity leadership so as to encourage teams to take on this principle and make it their own
- 3 Sharing of ideas about how best to handle those situations where we feel that our integrity is challenged in the moment, and know that if we don't speak up immediately we will almost certainly have compromised our integrity in ways we will later regret
- 4 A chance to reflect on the crucial relationship between integrity, trust and courage and develop personal strategies for drawing on our own courage to keep ourselves within our integrity
- 5 The opportunity to share personal feedback with other Fellows as the Conversation develops in ways that are always geared to our self-improvement as leaders
- 6 Supportive follow-up through the special WhatsApp group that we will set up at the end of the Conversation
- 7 Sharing of progress in implementing resolves at our online follow-up at 3.00pm on September 16th. We love the fact that nearly 3 months after a Conversation we're still there for each other as Leadership Fellows. We're always struck by the power of the sharing about which resolves have worked out really well - and not so well!

The more you put in the more you take away!

Our mission from 6.00pm on June 16th:

To explore how we might best ramp up the standard of integrity that we expect of ourselves as leaders, and inspire others through the ways in which we walk the walk - as well as talking the talk!

We will ask:

- Of the various ways in which we seek to uphold our own integrity as leaders, which ones make us most proud and which ones give us greatest cause for self-challenge?
- Focusing on those areas where we challenge ourselves, what is the one specific action that we could take that would make a difference in its own right and embolden us to assert our sense of integrity more strongly?
- How should we go about encouraging our team/s to agree a small number of principles and behaviours that enable them to walk the walk as high integrity teams?

During the final session we will each identify two or three stretching resolves to enable us to step forward more confidently as high integrity leaders over the coming weeks and months.

"This is me!"

"Tell us more"

"Yes I can!"

The three stages to our Conversation

We will structure our discussions around three stages:

1 "This is me!"

We put stage one under this heading because early on we want to encourage you to share a story that helps us understand better where you are coming from as a leader. To help us achieve strong connections across our group, please be up for sharing something about yourself in a way that helps others gain some sense of what high integrity leadership means to you personally.

2 "Tell us more"

Stage two is under this heading because we hope that by now we will all want to mobilise the power of questioning to draw each other out. We want to get behind each other's stories as we support each other in asking how we might each best ramp up the standard of integrity that we as leaders expect of ourselves and others.

3 "Yes I can!"

Our third and final stage is about each of us stepping into a really empowered place where we have a greater sense of all that we can achieve by being more thoughtful about how we walk the walk as high integrity leaders.

For every breakthrough in thinking during this third stage, we will be able to identify its origins in the stories that we have each shared and the curiosity that others have shown in response.

"This is me!"

From 6.00pm on Tuesday through to 10.00am on Wednesday

After agreeing our Guiding Principles for this Conversation, we will explore our first question in small groups.

Our thinking at the moment is that in small groups we should ask you:

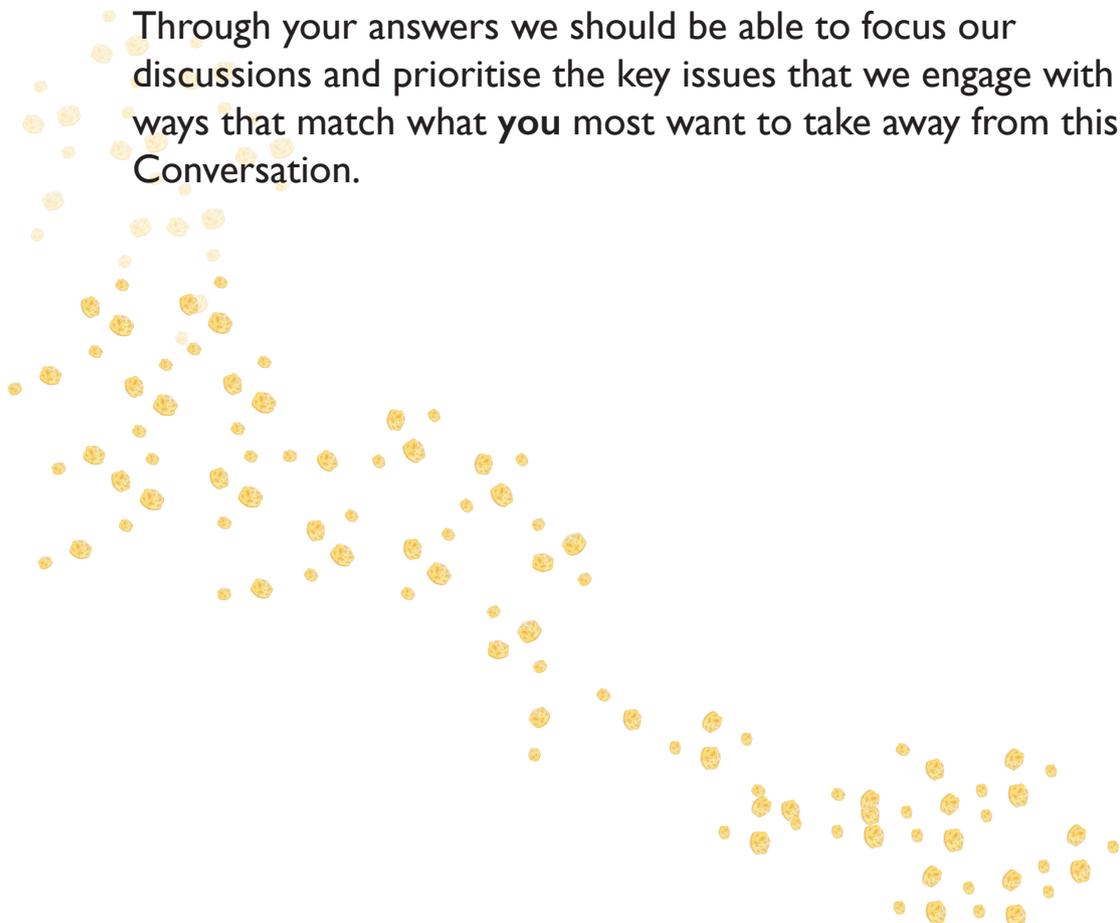

- At a previous Conversation (page 37 of our Leading with Integrity Insights Report) we concluded that:

"In so many ways, the struggle for higher integrity organisations takes place in the 'shades of grey'. More of us need to take a stand more often in relation to the relatively small things that could well cost us 'small bits' and 'crumbs' of our integrity".

- Do you agree? Which crumbs of your integrity come to mind first?

Through your answers we should be able to focus our discussions and prioritise the key issues that we engage with in ways that match what you most want to take away from this Conversation.

"Tell us more"

From around 10.00am on Wednesday through to 12.45pm

By around 10.00am on Wednesday we hope that everyone will have had a chance to make some sort of contribution to our discussion. We are now ready to start probing our subject in greater depth.

This is when we want to start by asking ourselves which of the ten key behaviours and challenges in Chapter 3 of Leading with Integrity (link on the final page) are most useful as building blocks for us in this Conversation.

We will also ask whether there are any other behaviours or challenges not in this list that we want to take on board at this stage to enable us better to "walk the walk" as high integrity leaders.

10 behaviours and challenges

- 1 I tell it straight
- 2 I never knowingly let a colleague fail
- 3 I ask pokey questions
- 4 I'm always up for challenging my own assumptions
- 5 I never undermine what's agreed in the room
- 6 I assume that others want to do the right thing too
- 7 How much of a people-pleaser am I?
- 8 Are we prepared to be vulnerable?
- 9 When will I know when my time is up?
- 10 How much am I up for renegotiating my boundaries?

"Yes I can!"

From 12.45 on Wednesday through to 3.30pm

Our discussion on the Wednesday morning should help us to sharpen up a small number of challenges that we regard as potentially high in impact, from the point of view of us seeking to create a higher integrity culture in our own organisations through the behaviours and habits that we adopt as leaders.

Being effective in challenging others

One thing we have reminded ourselves of in our three previous Conversations on leading with integrity is how difficult it is to challenge others in any way about their own integrity without this becoming instantly terminal for our relationship with them.

Hence the importance of using some word or phrase other than integrity, such as "doing the right thing".

As we suggest on page 47 of the Insights report,

- We can not expect to be effective in challenging others in relation to how they lead with integrity if we pretend that we never compromise our own.
- Do you agree with this?

We would like to open up this discussion over lunch, and come up with practical examples of how vulnerability on our part is key if we are to challenge others effectively.

We want to be careful to focus on each of us in the room, rather than discussing colleagues who aren't with us!

Experience has taught us that the more prepared we are to be tough on ourselves, the greater our chances of everyone in the group coming up with our own stretching and yet deliverable outcomes by the end.

STRETCHING OUTCOMES

Integrity, trust and courage

Before ending this commentary, may we draw your attention to the thought at the end of the Insights Report about the powerful relationship between integrity, trust and courage.

In the past we have at times recognised how easy it can be to "over manage" and over-engineer our relationships with peers and senior leaders, in ways that compromise our integrity.

We then avoid facing this by looking the other way, so that even in a discussion about integrity we manage to duck the issue!

Are we expecting enough of ourselves?

This is why we are keen that we ask whether we are expecting enough of ourselves in our key relationships at work, where we feel that there is a pretty good foundation of integrity and trust.

- Is it now time to step forward more as leaders committed to showing greater courage in being more open and truly authentic than we tend to be at present, as a matter of integrity?
- Rather than seeking to change our behaviour unilaterally, should we signal this first in some relationships by saying that we would like to agree to be more trusting with each other, and lower our respective boundaries as a symbol of the integrity of the relationship?

Throughout our time together we hope to support each other in sharpening up some powerful resolves that we can draw on as we each seek to "walk the walk" more thoughtfully and confidently in leading with integrity.

What is always exciting about these Leadership Conversations is the extent to which a breakthrough on the part of one Fellow triggers yet more powerful breakthroughs and resolves on the part of others, as we hope to experience on June 16-17.

Video link-up: September 16 2020

In the final minutes of the Conversation we will arrange a time for a follow-up video link-up in September to hear how much progress we have each made in taking forward our resolves.

The key to us making the best possible use of our time in September is for Fellows to share a brief email beforehand updating the rest of us on how you have acted on your resolves, and especially which one you found the most challenging. We then take it from there!

Suggested time for Video Link-up:

3.00 to 4.00pm on Wednesday, September 16th 2020
