Navigating Change for Intergenerational Impact – Led by Ingrid Abreu Scherer

This session is dedicated to the critical task of constructing a Theory of Change for intergenerational approaches, with a focus on understanding and enhancing the potential benefits across diverse contexts and age groups. Effective policy design necessitates stronger, evidence-based insights into how and why intergenerational practices work. The session will explore a wide spectrum of outcomes linked to well-being, including good health, employment, skills, relationships, and social cohesion. It will identify the mechanisms that drive change through intergenerational approaches, while also shedding light on the barriers and enablers of impact.
